CONFORMS

SURFACE	STATUS
README	Already spec-sheet shaped: the CH 0 · DESIG RL-Z0 titleblock is the document-chrome register done correctly
Doc control	DESIG RL-Z0 predates this guide and is retained as the canonical designation
Voice	Concrete, deadpan, wit from precision. "A local channel, for locals" is the register exactly
docs/*.md	Tables over prose, sentence-case headings, numbers bolded
Monospace throughout	-mono variable, no proportional face in the chrome

SEC.02 DELIBERATELY DIVERGES – THE CRT EXCEPTION

site/retro/ and the playout bumpers use a broadcast-phosphor palette, not the Riposte palette. Amber #ffb000, phosphor red #ff2d2d, near-black #0d0d0d/#141414/#1f1f1f, and Courier New rather than Jet-Brains Mono.

This is correct and should not be "fixed". Channel Z0 is a simulation of an analogue local TV channel; the whole premise is that it looks like something transmitted in 1987. The Riposte brand is a printed technical document – applying bone paper and harlequin bands to a CRT sign-off card would destroy the conceit that makes the project work.

The rule of thumb: anything that represents the broadcast gets the phosphor treatment; anything that represents Riposte operating the broadcast gets the brand.

SURFACE	PALETTE
site/retro/, bumpers, sign-off, on-air graphics	Phosphor. Courier. CRT.
site/index.html (the public-facing station page)	Riposte brand – queued below
docs/, README, schedules, ad standards	Riposte brand

QUEUED

- Bring `site/index.html` onto `riposte-brand.css`. It is the station's front door – the page a submitter or advertiser lands on – so it should read as a Riposte property that happens to run a retro channel, with the phosphor aesthetic quarantined behind `/retro/`. Currently it uses a neutral dark palette (`#1f1f1f`, `#141414`, `#b9b4a6`) that is neither.
- Add the standard `footer.colophon` to `site/index.html`, linking `/brand/`.
- `docs/ad-standards.md` should carry SEC.NN numbering – it is a specification and would read better filed as one.
